

About the Organisation

Impuls Rhein-Main e. V. is a non-profit organisation working in the fields of youth, family, integration and education. The association develops needs-based support services for people in different social life situations and accompanies them on their path towards greater participation, independence, and professional as well as social integration.

Its work is guided by the principles of empowerment and support for self-help, intercultural openness, diversity, democracy and equal participation.

Funding Notice

The project is funded through the Training and Qualification Budget (Ausbildungs- und Qualifizierungsbudget – AQB) of the State of Hesse. The Youth and Social Welfare Office of the City of Frankfurt am Main contributes through co-financing.

Integration durch Ausbildung – IdA

Creating orientation.
Developing career prospects.
Stabilising integration.

IdA provides holistic support for people with a refugee background as they settle in Germany, integrate into the labour market and build a sustainable life perspective in Germany.

Arrive. Understand. Move forward.

A bridge to vocational training, employment and social participation

Finding your footing in Germany and developing a career perspective is an important step towards independence, participation and a sustainable long-term future. At the same time, the path towards this goal is often complex: career goals, educational pathways, language skills, residence status, authorities and personal life circumstances are often closely connected.

This is exactly where IdA begins. The programme supports participants in understanding their opportunities within the German education, vocational training and labour market system, developing realistic career prospects and taking concrete next steps.

Labour market integration is not viewed in isolation. IdA combines career orientation with socio-educational stabilisation and provides support where personal, language-related, legal or everyday-life issues affect transitions into employment, education or vocational training.

The aim is not only quick placement, but a sustainable perspective: a career path that matches the participant's skills, requirements and personal circumstances and can remain stable in the long term.

IdA can support you if ...

You would like to move forward professionally but do not know which path is realistic for you in Germany.

You would like to start vocational training, employment, a qualification programme, further training or an educational pathway, but still need orientation, preparation or guidance.

You need support with job applications, job interviews or finding suitable vacancies.

You would like to improve your German language skills, computer/IT skills or professional foundations.

You have questions about authorities, residence status, work permits, recognition of your qualifications or other integration-related matters.

You are experiencing personal, family-related or psychosocial stress that makes your everyday life, stability or professional path more difficult.

You would like to gain more confidence in dealing with rights, duties, communication and expectations in the German working environment.

Target group and support needs

IdA is aimed at people with a refugee background from the Rhine-Main region who are in the process of settling professionally and socially in Germany and require structured support.

The programme particularly supports people who want to clarify their career opportunities in Germany, develop realistic pathways for the next steps and take concrete action towards vocational training, employment, education or qualification.

Multilingual Support

The programme takes language barriers into account as a key factor in the integration process. Counselling, orientation and guidance are provided in a language-sensitive way and — depending on availability — in several languages, so that important information can be understood and sustainable decisions can be made.

Possible languages: German, English, Farsi/Dari, Pashto, Turkish and Arabic.
